Julie Kembel s 14-pound dog Abby is a scrappy little thing. The poodle-Cavalier King Charles spaniel-golden retriever mix loves to chase squirrels (that she never catches) and is happy to run off by herself and then come back to Ms. Kembel or her husband, Bob, once she has had her fill of predatory excitement. But not if there s a big dog around.

doesn't always want to play rough.

Can Big Dogs and Small Dogs Co-Exist in a Family?

The small dog is at a much higher risk of injury. We recognize that there are gray areas in this policy to separate large and small dogs. There are some dogs that are small but tenacious. They seem too active to be with other small dogs. And there are some big dogs that are calm and don't do well with all the high energy of large dogs.

Dangers of Play Between Large and Small Dogs - The Dog Gurus

Big dogs will try to fit into small spaces thinking that is their size, and big dogs will try to play the same way small dogs play, not truly understanding the size difference between the two. This could also mean your big dog plays a little rougher and your little guy could become injured or even stepped on.
